

Timely Baseball Gossip

Peculiar Showing of the Cleveland Team. Hard Luck For Hughes Jennings of Baltimore and Frank Chance of the Chicago Nationals.

The Clevelanders of the American league have been making a peculiar showing ever since the season opened. Nearly all of their games have been shut-outs, with the slugging Napoleons suffering no less than seven shut-outs—a wonderful record for a bunch of heavy hitters, but a further testimonial to the effectiveness of the pitchers when they can use the spit ball.

Such light batting as has been indulged in by three teams like Cleveland, St. Louis and Detroit so early in the season has never been known before, and Cleveland carries off the honors for the year so far for being the team to be "chickened" the greatest number of times and also for being in the hardest luck. No wonder President Kilfoyl remarked recently, "I tell you this is going to be a hard season for the pitchers, but I guess we have a few that can hold their own with any of them."

Manager Hugh Jennings of the Baltimore baseball club learned recently that the blow he received on the left arm at Cumberland a few days before fractured a bone. The fact was disclosed by an X ray photograph taken at the Johns Hopkins hospital. The photograph showed the crack plainly. It extends clear through the bone about two inches above the wrist. He will be out of the Baltimore lineup at least four weeks, so that the bone may knit properly.

Frank Chance, captain of the Chicago Nationals, has had hard luck this season. He was injured in a practice game in the south and was forced to stay out of the game for a lengthy period. Chance is one of the greatest field generals in the national game, and he plays with all the fire and vim of an untrained colt. He covers first sack for Selee's "cubs" in brilliant fashion. Last year he ranked sixth in the batting list, with an average of .310. With Chance back in the game Chicago will undoubtedly chop down the lead of her more fortunate league rivals.

FRANK CHANCE.

From Chicago it is learned that "major league players have evolved another name for the spit ball less offensive than the expressive but inelegant title by which it was christened. They call it the eel ball now, because it has all the characteristics of that aquatic article and is harder to handle generally." The players will find it just as difficult to hit it under any title, but perhaps the public will find the new name less offensive.

"Pop" Anson, the grand old man of the diamond, figured in a very peculiar and amusing play some years ago," said Dan Collyer of "The College Widow" company recently. "The game was between Cincinnati and Chicago, and of course Father Anson was holding down the initial bag. The score was close, and, as Cincinnati had three men on the bags in the ninth inning with old Eagle Eye Beckley up, it looked as though they would win out.

"Dummy" Hoy was playing a considerable distance off first, and Anson was keeping him on the jump pretending to catch the ball and put him out. The crowd was yelling, and the excitement was intense. Suddenly a black object was seen coming directly at Anson. Hoy saw it, too, and he made a frantic endeavor to get back to the base. Anson reached up and caught the object in his gloved hand. It proved to be a bird—a common, ordinary sparrow. He touched Hoy with it, and the mute was so disgusted that he turned his back and started away from the base, thinking he was out. In the meantime the pitcher whipped the ball over to Anson, and, despite the frantic yells of the rooters to 'get back, Dummy' Hoy was touched out, this making the final put out and losing the game for Cincinnati."

President Pulliam of the National league is quoted as saying, "More women are attending ball games than ever before in the game's history." This female patronage is having a refining influence upon the game and its ex-emplars. It is believed, however, that it will not result in so much refinement as to make the game effeminate. Baseball is a strenuous, a man's game in all that the name implies.

Barr, Sea Jockey.

Career of Great Skipper Who Won Kaiser's Cup For America.

By reason of his recent exploit of steering the schooner Atlantic to victory in the Kaiser's transatlantic cup race Captain Charles Barr has established a new claim to fame. That Barr is the greatest of all racing yachtsmen no one can deny. His record of victories is sensational. He is the wizard of the sea and seems to have supernatural ability to send yachts across finish lines in the van of desperate rivals.

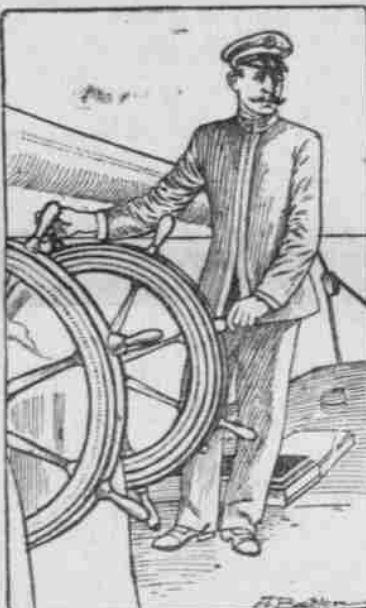

Barr is the embodiment of courage and confidence. Boastfulness is foreign to his nature. He dislikes to be inactive, and when he hasn't a command is studiously looking still deeper into the mysteries of his calling. No yachting skipper in the world exceeds him in his knowledge of the rules of racing. Quick as an electric flash in cases of emergency, he has escaped the many unpleasant incidents of his calling which are often due to errors.

Since the days of the Minerva, which he raced across the Atlantic, Barr has been well known and liked by yachtsmen. Although born in Gaurock, Scotland, he has been a citizen of the United States for many years. His handling of the cup defenders Columbia and Reliance and the deep interest in the success of these boats alone entitle him to premier honors in his calling and the friendship of the American people.

Barr brought the Vigilant back from England in the spring of 1895, and then came near topping off hours from the record of the western passage. The yachting world has credited him with his full due in the matter of the Ingomar's trip abroad last year, and the way that he cut down the successes of her opponents to a minimum is regarded as marvelous. It looks nowadays as if when nautical victories are to be achieved those in charge, if ever in doubt, must fall back on Barr.

Barr never becomes excited or "rattled." At the finish of one of his most exciting America's cup races he quietly ate an apple while the ocean about him was pandemonium and the wires on land and under the sea were telling the story of his achievement.

At the Lizard, England, where the recent race finished, he celebrated the Atlantic's victory by smoking a cigar that many have been stowed in his locker since the ship left New London, Conn., a fortnight or so before the starting day fixed for the ocean race.

Now that Barr has completed one more ocean hitch, that from Dover to Heigoland, across the North sea, a matter of 310 nautical miles, he will say goodbye to the Atlantic, return to New York and assume charge of one of his old commands, the seventy footer Minerva, now the property of William Ross Proctor of the New York Yacht club.

Barr was originally intended to be a grocer. He was given a job in a store in Gaurock, but ran away to go to sea. He spent all of one bitter winter in Scottish waters aboard a fishing sloop. He led a hard life, but he picked up the rudiments of the sailor's art. Soon he began to study navigation, and at the end of two years there was no skipper on the whole east coast of the British isles that could outwit him in a race.

Barr is thoroughly domestic when ashore. He believes that the sailor's wife should be his sweetheart too. He has a pretty home and a charming wife on the Connecticut shore of Long Island sound.

WILL ENFORCE BALL LAWS.

"National League Players Must Behave," Says Pulliam.

"I am trying to enforce the laws of the league and to have clean baseball," said President Pulliam of the National league recently, "but we are having a lot of trouble in the league at present. The laws are there for me to enforce, however, and I am going to do it.

"If they hit too hard at times it is up to the club owners to repeal them, for as long as they are on the statute book I will enforce them.

"The fund from the fines that I am imposing on players and managers for being put out of the game is increasing at an alarming rate, and I expect that the trust companies of New York will soon begin offering inducements for the deposit. As soon as the players know, however, that these fines are to continue they will be more peaceable in the game."

Big Meets For College Track Stars

Athletic Interest Centers In the Coming Conference Events In Chicago and the Annual Eastern Carnival—Stagg's Men Are Hopeful.

All the world of athletics is agog over the coming intercollegiate championship carnivals. Of course the conference meet at Chicago, in which the members of the Western Intercollegiate Athletic association participate, and the intercollegiate meet at Franklin field, Philadelphia, are the principal centers of interest.

The conference meet occurs June 3. The intercollegiate championships will be held May 27.

The Michigan track and field team, because of its stellar work at Philadelphia recently, is favorite for the western premiership, while the eastern sharpshooter Yale's able aggregation will carry off first honors in the east.

The University of Pennsylvania has a track team that should also figure as prominent point winners in the intercollegiate matches.

W. D. Dear is expected by the Quakers to win the hundred yard dash. Dear defeated Knakel of Columbia, Rublon and Miller of Princeton and Seitz of Georgetown at Philadelphia.

Harvard, Cornell and Princeton have spent much time and money this season in developing track and field men. Princeton's team is strengthened by several freshmen of promise. One of them is Symonds, the lad who did well in the broad jump at the Philadelphia relay meet.

R. E. Williams, the veteran runner, will be Princeton's mainstay in the distance events.

Harvard's main hope is to defeat Yale at any cost. The rivalry between these two famous New England institutions is waxing stronger and stronger each year.

The recent return of Coach Stagg to the University of Chicago from a southern visit has meant much to the Chicago athletes, who are counting upon winning the championship this year from their old rivals, Michigan.

Evans Malbrook, who represents Michigan university in the conference committee, urged that the events be held in Ann Arbor this year, since it was originally intended by the promoters of the annual meet that it should be held each year in some different college center. The committee decided, however, that Chicago was the only logical place to hold the contests, which are each year growing of more importance to western athletes.

The Wildy Clytles feel it incumbent upon themselves to win this year from Michigan, which has triumphed now for five successive seasons. The Chicagoans have a strong track team this year, and Michigan has been weakened by the loss of Ralph Rose, who won the meet for the maize and blue last year by carrying off first honors in the weight events. With the two colleges fighting it out at even chances in the shot, hammer and discus, the experts declare that Chicago stands a fine chance to triumph.

Stagg's return aroused great enthusiasm among the students, who turned out to welcome the coach, who had been on a health tour for several weeks.

Hoppe a Wizard.

Plans of the Young American Billiard Champion Who Defeated Schaefer.

Willie Hoppe, the Admiral Togo of the billiard world, recently closed an engagement at a New York billiard academy, during which he defeated several leading experts. His many victories during the last three years defy enumeration. Hoppe has just passed his eighteenth birthday, and yet he stands at the very top of the list of professional billiard players.

This boy is unquestionably the most marvelous billiard player the world has ever known, as was shown in his recent series of games with the great Jake Schaefer in Boston, when he made a grand average of 25 against the "Wizard's" 23.

Willie Hoppe was born at Cornwall-on-the-Hudson, about a two hours' ride from New York, and has been playing billiards almost since he was a child. He commenced to attract the attention of billiard experts when he was ten years of age and has constantly improved in his playing ever since, until today he stands second to none of the great exponents of the game—our own "Wizard" Schaefer not excepted.

He possesses the coolness and nerve of a veteran, and for delicacy of touch, sweep of stroke and brilliancy of execution has no superior.

Hoppe will commence a two weeks' engagement on Aug. 7 at Mike Sweeney's billiard parlors, on the board walk at Atlantic City, where he will give exhibitions in fancy billiard playing for the entertainment of the thousands who throng the famous New Jersey watering place. The boy's father, who directs the affairs of his noted son, has about completed arrangements to go abroad this fall and has arranged their itinerary so as to enable the boy to give exhibitions in all the principal European cities. It is expected that a match will be arranged with Ira Morningstar when they reach Paris.

Morningstar has expressed a willingness to play the young American a thousand points up for $1,000 a side at eighteen inch bill line.

Morningstar has been playing in brilliant form in the French capital for the past two years and is looked upon by the billiard experts on the other side of the Atlantic as an unbeatable champion.

Hoppe is undoubtedly the best on this side of the Atlantic.

HITCHCOCK AS HAMLET.

Comedian Says He Can Improve Playing of Historic Role.

Let Nat Goodwin and Francis Wilson look to their laurels. They must not think that they are the only graduates from light opera that can turn the trick on the "legitimate" stage. Raymond Hitchcock, not content with the glory that has come to him through his performance of George Ade's "The Yankee Consul," yearns to have a try at William Shakespeare's "Hamlet."

"I have made an exhaustive study of 'Hamlet' and am honestly ambitious to play the part. I intend to do so at the earliest possible opportunity. No doubt a lot of persons will laugh at this, but that does not make any difference. It is my opinion that 'Hamlet' has not been played naturally enough—at least by impersonators of the role that have come under my view. My wife, Flora Zabelle, has dubbed the performance of the character I have in mind 'the human Hamlet,' and that at least is alliterative."

Meanwhile Mr. Hitchcock understands that he is slated by Henry W. Savage to appear next season in the new piece that manager has accepted from John Kendrick Bangs called "The Spectroscope." It was read to the comedian for the first time a few days ago.

Baseball's Development.

Major league baseball has been developed to such a state that one error, one hit or one little slip up of any sort may decide the game. In the olden time a batting rally of several runs did not mean that a game was won or lost, for the other team probably would come back and go their opponents a run or two better. One run is deciding lots of games these days.

Cold Storage BEEF

Not shipped in from a Cold Storage Plant but from our own cold storage here in Bisbee.

This means more than you will recognize at first glance. Cold storage beef shipped in is not in as good condition to be marketed to the Bisbee consumers as our beef. We buy our own cattle, kill them ourselves and then put them in our cold storage, from which the meat is sold to you direct from the cold storage on short notice. Therefore our meat comes to you fresher with less chance from taint during this hot weather.
